

P-Noy was only setting record straight—Palace

By Christine G. Asensio

PRESIDENT Aquino is not on the map but only wanted to set the record straight regarding the events that ignited the Marcos dictatorship and reached his late mother, Corason Aquino, in the presidency in 1986.

That was how his Aquino's deputy spokesperson, Miguel Zubo, explained yesterday the President's advertisement to the Marcoses during the celebration marking the 25th anniversary of his last work.

First, Ferdinand "Bongbong" Marcos Jr. had claimed that the country would have been a prospering in Singapore had his father not been supplanted by a popular uprising in 1986.

Asked on government radio why Mr. Aquino wanted to be evoking the Marcoses, Zubo pointed out that the President did say that everyone was entitled to their opinion about what happened in 1986.

"However, he felt compelled to set the record straight on what Senator Marcos said, that the Philippines could have been a Singapore by now," she said.

Mr. Zubo acknowledged that it could not be avoided that others would have a different opinion about the first family's power grip.

"But, probably we should also think that the freedom we have today is largely just what we owe to what people did in 1986 and I think we should be thankful and reflect on this," he said.

The other day, Mr. Zubo said that he did not believe that the Philippines would have become another Singapore had he stayed the course with Marcos.

"There is not for him, we probably would have become another Libya. You don't even have to ask myself for it. Just ask the people who were there," the President said on Saturday at a ceremony honoring people who had struggled against the Marcos regime.

The President, meanwhile, has appointed Renato "Y" Pangilinan and Timothy T. Guzman, daughter of former Secretary, as members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Advisory Council (Asian).

Also appointed to Asian was Jay Y. Bautista. Zubo said yesterday that is under the Department of Foreign Affairs.

CONCEPCION INDUSTRIES, INC.
CELEBRATES THE LONG AND LASTING LEGACY OF ITS FOUNDER, JOSE CONCEPCION, SR.
IN COMMEMORATION OF HIS 109TH BIRTH ANNIVERSARY.

Jose N. Concepcion, Sr. was a pioneering Filipino industrialist, who left an indelible imprint on the Philippine industrial scene.

The key to his success was his natural management skills that enabled him to exhibit the drive, the determination, and the intuition to seek out profitable business ventures and consistently make good judgments without the benefit of project feasibility studies and modern management techniques.

His natural managerial talent may be attributed to the following distinct work values:

- INVOLVEMENT WITH DETAILS
- HARD WORK AND DEDICATION
- AN INTENSE DRIVE FOR PERFECTION & EXCELLENCE
- PERSONAL AND BUSINESS INTEGRITY

This is best exemplified when in 1935, Jose Concepcion, Sr. and his beloved and enterprising wife, Herminia, established the National Business School in a building at the foot of the McArthur Bridge (formerly known as the Palena Bldg. where FEATI University is presently located) in Manila. This was followed by an import trading firm in 1945.

Later, in 1958, Jose Concepcion, Sr. became President of Edward J. Neil - a large foreign-owned enterprise in the Philippines.

At age 40, when many would rather retire, he went on to embark on his vision of establishing an integrated air conditioning plant in Asia.

With this vision, Jose Concepcion, Sr. as CHAIRMAN of the Board, started a company that was to become the hallmark of Filipino capability and ingenuity - CONCEPCION INDUSTRIES, INC. Under his guidance, Raul Concepcion was trained to be President & Chief Executive Officer preparing him for bigger responsibilities in the near future.

from these humble beginnings, Concepcion, Sr. conceived and pioneered manufacturing ventures never before introduced in the Philippines.

In 1942, Concepcion Industries, Inc. made its presence felt in the appliance industry. It signed up numerous and prestigious licensing contracts. Such as:

- Carrier International that set the pace in the domestic market for air conditioners
- Industrial Copper Corporation under a joint undertaking with KOBEL Steel Ltd. of Japan to manufacture copper tubes
- Copeland Corporation to manufacture compressors
- Gould Century Electric Company to manufacture electric motors

In a relatively brief span of 15 years, Concepcion Industries, Inc. had evolved into one of the country's most integrated manufacturing organizations with highly specialized engineering and technological capabilities.

The CI Plant in 1978

The current CI Plant

Today, the combined sales revenues of the Concepcion Group led by Concepcion-Carrier Air-Conditioning Company, is close to Pnp 7.0 Billion.

But the work is hardly finished.

The dream of industrialization goes on and the desire to help improve the quality of life of our countrymen through quality Philippine made products and social advocacies will not end.

THE LEGACY OF JOSE CONCEPCION, SR. IS ALIVE AND WELL.
IT WILL CONTINUE TO GROW IN THE YEARS TO COME, ESPECIALLY IN THE CAPABLE HANDS OF HIS SUCCESSOR.

Cook noted that CFT programs had significant impact by uplifting people from extreme poverty and there was "very little evidence" that CFT schemes promoted dependency by the poor.

Why tolerate bad politicians?

PEETERS, MIKE popularly known for his success as public servant, is virtually all about self-interest. A politician almost has two reasons for his every political act, namely, his good reason and his real reason. His good reason is, of course, public service. But his real reason is self-interest. That is why he campaigns ruthlessly and apologetically in his own self-interest office, even as he pleads—sometimes by accident—with the poor majority of his constituents to allow him to serve them.

Call that his mission in life or his legacy in the family—or whatever, but a politician always tends to project himself as a savior in the past. And that is why the best we always will be.

The common problem, however, with most politicians is that since they are elected to office, they continuously develop and adopt a series of personal powers and entitlements in their office and even their extended jurisdiction, that they become immune to reprimand, the law, or the they used to believe in it, they can claim public office.

Worse still, many of them state and run over their public office like a "candy of tin" or corporate respect to themselves.

A transparent, accountable appointment

Presidential spokesman Robert Lowery underscored the importance of appointing a Commission on Health Care with a majority of physicians and health care workers to study and make recommendations. He could not agree more. However, the appointing process is as important as the pre-appointing appointment.

from Fidel Castro at the congressional hearings on the Cuba piracy gains highlighted the need for reform in the justice agency. As President Aquino began, in 1986, new reforms.

Classical conditioning through an open and isolated process.

Specifically for appointments to these and other independent constitutional commissions, we urge the President to make known to the public the composition of any internal search committee that will assess the candidates, the art of criteria being used to evaluate candidates and the names of the individuals or groups involved in such evaluations.

One of the biggest problems of the present administration are the highly politicized nature of appointments, as there is deprivation in institutions. President Chaudhary's last high profile appointment, made in the morning days after noon, was totally the most controversial. The ministerial appointments of the third justice of the Supreme Court, without any publicity and accountability in the process, has again made me broaden down the same weaknesses again. We know that this time the public will get what is rightfully theirs, and we will witness of integrity and competence appointed by way of an open and accountable process.

Letter-writer's blasphemous misreading of Christ's injunction

OLIVIE TWEED, author of the Feb. 15 novel titled "There is corruption inside a school," is not proud to be a teacher. She claims: "We are educated not to have our wrists slapped as we're told a director up there, especially in being corrupt against each other down here."

log² of χ^2 -deviation expression is a measure

The world is indeed full of differences, as demonstrated by Christ himself with his crucifixion, but we add to the suffering by ignoring the importance of how to live this life. It has to well lived and then we create our heaven or hell by the way we live in this world. There are no possible laws of cause and effect...one action, no matter how much we forgive, will always have consequences.

his understated use of rhetoric. "If you must enter the world, the case of the Father is not wide open" (lines 1, 3-4). A rhetorical flourish he avoids, as "all that is really possible" had "not obtained from 1900" (1, 5-6). Examples of his brevity, and also of his directness of thought, I only see in the Bible as God's promises give us, as the Book of Instruments we have as time to do here and now, looking forward to the life hereafter as citizens.

University of Connecticut. The American Bar Association is also pushing for an open and competitive process for appointments to the judges. One constitutional innovation, such as the Oklahoma, the Supreme Court, the Commission on Elections, the Civil Service Commission and the CIA. Good appointments should happen by design, not by accident. The only way this can happen is if the appointments process is more open and accountable.

of good governance, transparency and accountability to conduct the search for the truth.

Stealthy promulgation of ruling questionable

THREE is enough reason for us, the relatives and friends of the late Eugene A. Ten and his wife, to join the American People's Driver License Commission, to initiate the necessary proceedings of the kidnapping and murder case People of the Philippines vs. Indolito, et al. (TA-2005-44, TC-2005-544 and TC-2006-00), by Month 10 of the Regional Trial Court of Cebu, Tagaytay City, a second and final hearing.

The case had originated in the area court in 17 years. Justice delayed is justice denied by the state, a brilliant lawyer advised, who had grown disillusioned by our legal system. And when another year would pass without any developments on the case, the court suddenly notified on last Feb. 1 that the case would be pronounced on Feb. 14.

While we welcomed the army that justice would finally be served, we could not help but sense that something ominous would happen. Our worst fears were not unfounded. Despite overwhelming and all-right unanimous admission during the early years of the trial, the court dismissed them by testimony for being hearing and acquired several of the accused including the alleged mastermind. In no probability, only the lovely oligarch was accused of carrying out a crime that would be

The court's decision came as a shock and disappointment to many. In addition to the many gains made, it was believed that not a single member of the press was ahead of the day the ruling was to be issued on the case, which involved alleged payments and possible coverage by news outlets and media would only be November 1994.

The questionable issue in which we, the aggrieved party, were notified and the wrongdoer "beat-his" protagonism without the presence of friends, only begs the question: Why would want to benefit from keeping the door open?

The absence of public involvement during the more dramatic steps of the political process can only be interpreted as an attempt to "shut public opinion out." The function of public opinion is not to interrupt on a single assumption but to contribute to creating a better and transparent system of accountability in this case, national Seriousness pays off: waiting for justice for Eugene A. Tsi and Mihai Ciombarciu had gone the wrong way. For so who have always been served by the justice system, we are forced now to rethink whether further reforms in this justice system will only result in better. The answer lies in the hands of the judiciary, without ourselves too busy with our own concerns by the influence of powerful institutions who undoubtedly make a mockery out of the frequent justice system.

And yes, giving by the Clinton private logs, Rainsford seemed sure to be listed as a loser, not because he spilled the beans to some of his supporters and merely wanted to save his own neck from the pulpit, but, last I checked, please see in a more detailed column.

Inquirer exhibit a big success—thanks to readers

By Marlene Medina
Inquirer Staff

"This is the daily bread of every Inquirer family."

This was the message of the Inquirer reader Edith Tate, one of the hundreds of visitors who visited the "25 Years of Inquirer" exhibit at the 4th floor of the City Hall Annex in North Avenue in Quezon City, which ran from Feb. 15 to 21.

The exhibit was in line with the Philippine Daily Inquirer's 25th anniversary celebration and in commemoration of the 50th year of the 1986 EDSA People Power Revolution.

It featured a collection of old photographs, front-page reproductions of memorable news and different business milestones.

One of the main attractions in the exhibit was the two giant newspaper boards where visitors could write their thoughts and suggestions for the newspaper.

Conceal Rodriguez of the Inquirer's corporate affairs said that "about 18 large message boards were filled up with heartwarming and encouraging messages for Inquirer."

Some of the messages read: "Happy anniversary, Inquirer," "Inquirer," "Good Morning" and "More power!"

Others spoke of the Inquirer's influence on their lives. There was one from Marlene Medina which said: "You're my favorite news a person!" Another one wrote: "You made us all independently go online."

There were some who offered suggestions. Deborah of Calabang City wrote: "Keep spreading the truth to the people." Lilibeth said: "We still love you in spite of the truth and looking for the truth."

Another visitor was upset specifically about the newspaper's handling of the 2009 election. "Continue to report on issues and not on personalities," she wrote.

One message described the Inquirer this way: "You're a newspaper, not a politician (Pillar is a newspaper)." Another one read: "You're a news... not a politician."

The exhibit was considered a major success not only because it effectively displayed how the history of the newspaper was intertwined with the country's history but also because it allowed the Inquirer to hear from its readers and supporters.

Organizers said the exhibit area was well frequented by mall-goers, particularly in the afternoon and the early evening. The crowd was composed of children, students, young professionals and people in their 30s and 40s—mostly devoted readers of the newspaper. "The composition of people—young and old—also indicated the exhibit was successful," Rodriguez said.

The organizers also said that the response they got from the adult goers was very positive. According to them, there were even instances in which teachers who had already seen the exhibit returned the next day to see their students' learning.

A registration booth was set up at one side of the gallery in order to monitor the number of visitors. Five newspapers and magazines were given away to those who signed the guest book.

Clearly, visitors to the exhibit regarded positively to the Inquirer's praise which helped make it a huge success. "The love for IQR is so epic. The love was so inspiring. It makes one really proud to be an Inquirer," Rodriguez said.

Ramon Ralagas, one of Inquirer's corporate affairs, said that the exhibit goes on three more days to give visitors an opportunity to see the history of the country as well as the newspaper's by looking at the reproduction of the Inquirer from pages. According to him, they received many queries from people who wanted to get copies of old Inquirer issues. Copies of the Inquirer book "25 Years of Inquirer" should be at the exhibit.

He also said that the exhibit successfully demonstrated how the love and support of the Filipino people for the Inquirer had remained constant all throughout the paper's 50 years.

QC gov't backs juvenile law review

By Marlene Medina

THE QUEZON CITY government has announced its support for the amendment of the Juvenile Law to include teenagers who had employees to assist prosecutors in charge of drug-related cases.

New Mayor Benjie Belmont said this was in support of the Department of Interior and Local Government which earlier announced its plan to seek an amendment to the law of the Juvenile Justice and Welfare Act.

Under the juvenile justice law which was passed in 2006, children aged 15 years and below are exempted from any criminal liability.

Belmont said that there had been a reported increase in the number of children being used to commit in their illegal activities.

He added that the number of criminal incidents involving minors had also gone up.

According to him, the children were being used either as drug couriers or accomplices.

Belmont said the city government was the first local government to endorse the juvenile justice law.

However, while the city government was in favor of amending the law, city mayor said he would also push for the establishment of community-based rehabilitation facilities for youth offenders to address the problem of juvenile delinquency in the city.

At present, minors arrested by the police are sent up to the city government's General Services Office (GSO) where they are held in a detention and rehabilitation center for youth offenders.

Belmont said that based on records, the Makati Juvenile Justice Center had 216 wards in its care.

At the same time, he proposed the establishment of another facility which would provide youth offenders with shelter, food, clothing, medical and education as well as value formation activities designed to improve their well-being to productive members of society.

LIBYANS cheer anti-government slogans in front of a defaced portrait of strongman Muammar Qaddafi during Saturday's demonstration in the eastern city of Tobruk.

Rebels closing in on Libyan capital

TRIPOLI—Rebels advanced on the Libyan capital on Sunday as US President Barack Obama urged Muammar Qaddafi to step down "now" amid growing fears that his century-long rule could descend into civil war. (See story on Page A7)

The UN Security Council imposed a travel ban and a freeze on assets on Qaddafi's regime and ordered an investigation into possible crimes against humanity by the Libyan strongman, the first time any such decision has been made unanimously. (See story on Page A6)

Signs of a full-scale civil war as Qaddafi loyalists on power have prompted warnings to evacuate tens of thousands of citizens and close down embassies, as enemy-reported protests, looting and food shortages.

Rebels are closing in on the capital, where Qaddafi's loyalists have been carrying out actions in about one-third of the city, witnesses say.

A resident told Agence France Presse that tanks and all-terrain vehicles driven by regime partisans were patrolling along deserted streets.

"This escape of mine makes me feel I am in danger," said Mohammed Jall, 41, an engineer in the last batch of Libyans evacuated from home.

"The situation will put the lives on my neck. He took all my belongings—clothes, shoes, even my car."

A QADDAFI loyalist shows Qaddafi's portrait at a challenge to his regime.

We heard gunshots every day... People have to go without food and water for three or four days as the situation there is bad. People are on the streets... police stations have been burnt down. There is no safety, no police."

Libyan former justice minister announced he was forming a transitional government to replace Qaddafi's crumbling regime, which now controls only some coastal areas around the capital and a few long-time bastions in the west.

Muammar Qaddafi said the new administration would include representatives of the regular army, members of which has defected to the opposition, and would pave the way for free and fair elections in three months time.

"Our national government has military and civilian personalities. It will lead for at most three, four months, and then there will be free elections and the people will choose their leader," Abdel Jall said by phone in the eastern town of Misrata, an opposition stronghold.

It was not immediately clear whether other crisis-free Libyans themselves had condemned the move with Abdel Jall, who is reported on Monday to grant of the increasingly deadly crackdown on opposition in the regime.

Qaddafi's son, Saif al-Islam, once regarded as an heir apparent, has said the crisis had "opened the doors to civil war."

Amid growing shortages in the capital, Tripoli, oil-producing north Africa nation, people joined long queues for bread and petrol on Saturday.

The UN World Food Programme's director for the food distribution system said "at risk of collapse" in a mostly desert nation which is heavily dependent on imports.

In Libya's third city Misrata, which falls in the opposition's hands by midweek, the situation is described by witnesses as "a state of chaos" as the rebel forces are closing in on the city.

Libyan's human rights of domestic helpers, construction workers and all industries were among the most-affected sectors by the crisis, according to witnesses in an airport and sea. More than 50,000 people have fled through the sea after crossing on Libyan warships, witnesses have said.

China police smother protest

SHANGHAI—Large numbers of police and new units like shell whistles and water clearing trucks—squashed over protests in Shanghai a central leader in a series of calls for peaceful gatherings modeled on recent democratic movements in the Middle East.

At one end of Shanghai's People's Square, uniformed police lines whistles, shouting and directed people to keep moving, though about 200 people—a combination of collectors and quiet sympathizers—gathered there.

In Beijing, tanks normally used to control the crowds drove beyond the city's commercial shopping districts to the edges of the city.

Foreign journalists met with Chinese police outside the Shanghai, authorities called foreign reporters on Sunday and warned them to stay away from the protest sites, while police in Beijing followed some protesters and blocked those with cameras from entering the Shanghai shopping street where protests were held.

Police also detained several Chinese, at locations in Beijing and here in Shanghai, putting them into vans and driving them away, though officials did not give a reason.

The most heated regime crackdown will now show how the authorities call for protest have left the authoritarian government shaken.

China's rapid growth and rising living standards, still, the leadership is battling inflation and worries that democratic movements could shake its rule.

brotherhood and may affect social stability," Premier Wen Jiabao said in an address after an evening of Chinese New Year's Eve. He said: "I know the impact that protest can have on society and the deep awareness of their extreme importance."

The latest incident call for protest that first erupted on an anonymous Chinese forum website 15 days ago called for Chinese to initiate the "Shanghai Revolution" due started in Tiananmen Square, urging them to gather peacefully in cities in 14 cities. A second call earlier this week asked protesters to target cities.

While the origins of the calls are unclear, police have questioned, placed under house arrest and detained more than 100 people.

At least five have been detained on suspicion of inciting society chaos, in some cases for posting information about the protest calls.

Mideast crisis to dampen the crisis in the Middle East were present, but does not indicate his position.

"The possible impact of a post-harvest crisis in the region is manifold and all may adversely impact on government's stated economic targets," said Jonathan Calaguing Jr., a dealer at Sociocreditobank's Agri Account Capital and Futures Group.

Caterpillar said the immediate effect was already being felt with oil and commodity prices falling. In turn prompting local oil companies to push up pump prices of fuel. "Prices of basic commodities are going to rise as well as input and transportation costs adjust to the changes," he said.

The updated line Martin created. The displacement of various weights and forced the government to implement a new law to Libya, Sudan and Iraq.

BREAKTIME

CONRADO R. ALVAREZ IV

THE GIGAS firm called Gigas must have found a new ally in the Department of Finance to help it push its P1.4 billion deal with the National Power Corporation.

As we all know, during the early administration of Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, Gigas tried to build its bid to hold the bid contract for so-called century energy on offshore projects.

Apparently through Gigas's technology, the government would earn some P120 billion in additional revenue in only seven years from the 100-million-hectare.

In other words, the offshore industry particularly offshore companies, has been cheating the government that much to end the century energy.

Government institutions refused Gigas's demands. They include the Media, the National Tax Research Center, and House of Representatives.

For one, Gigas could not provide a team for its claims, saying only that it was afraid from international media.

But, that unsupported claim—as additional P120 billion in tax collection—was—was the reason why the government had to pay Gigas some P100 bid fee for its technology.

If Gigas's assumption had been wrong, the government would end up losing to the P110 billion contract.

Thus the Gigas project was derailed under the same administration.

Now under the Aquino (PDP II) administration of our leader Benigno Aquino (Jr.), the same company is making another big push for its project with the DOE.

And Gigas seems to be enjoying the "romance" of our leader Benigno Aquino (Jr.) and our country.

According to recent press reports, the DOE has been looking for the same company.

For instance, the DOE's released some Gigas's own report on collection from the industry showing only P20 billion in 2010, which was much lower than the target.

If it is true, the DOE is still in the same Gigas, or someone, they passed it.

Anyway, a technical official of the DOE revealed in a recent congressional hearing that the bureau's estimate is only a collection for 2010 actually for P20 billion.

Question: Why was the DOE underestimating the offshore energy tax and, secondly, another question: Was it an intentional error?

Lately, Gigas was said to have made headway with the Aquino (PDP II) administration as pushing for its offshore energy contract.

From what I gathered, Gigas tried to claim on the incredible bid looking in the offshore industry of more than P120 billion in seven years.

Never mind that a study conducted by the De La Salle University concluded that, if there were no Gigas in the offshore energy tax, it would probably not reach P120 billion, or the mere nominal revenue claimed by Gigas to justify its P110 billion contract.

Clearly, now this is hardly my kind of deal.

But here is one thing: The entire industry is capable of producing about 150 billion gigawatts each a year.

Again, that is the reality.

Thus, for the limited tax collection in P20 billion to seven years, or about P120 billion yearly, the entire industry would have to lose from the government production of hundred million of produced gigawatts a year.

Indeed, really how do we expect such an operation a drop that current income only to a few in DOE officials and Gigas company agent?

WESM were supposed to be the share of the publicly held, and disposed, Philamstar Holdings.

Well, a check with the Philippine Stock Exchange showed that a great portion of the company's outstanding shares remain untraded, and the trading of what looks like shares held by the public, of course, remains "unpopular."

Tell me that the Court of Appeals already filed a "Tribunal order" on the company's bank account.

The info from the PSE on the Philamstar Holdings were should be considering the stock market activities.

One of the groups—disputing ownership of the P1 billion company—accounted last year that the corporation would earn additional funds by selling shares to the public.

What if the whole trading of the listed shares is suspended? Even while hundreds of millions worth of shares are not sold?

Although Philamstar Holdings has a capitalization of P1 billion, only P50 million worth of shares are listed on the PSE, that trading suspended to this.

The remaining P950 million worth of shares, which mostly were held by private investors, were mostly held by Philippine Laporte (P40 million), Philippine Laporte (P40 million), Philippine Laporte (P40 million), and Philamstar (P80 million), are all not listed.

In other words, even if trading of shares had not been suspended, those shares could still not be traded on the PSE. In other words, even only a small portion of the outstanding shares is listed, there is hardly any liquidity in the issue. How fair is this to the public holding Philamstar shares?

Remember that Philamstar Holdings was originally known as Liberty Media, which had been listed long ago. The reason that it still had such stock holders when the Philamstar group acquired it was transformed into a holding company.

The antiquated Philippine Communications Commission (Philcom) owns some 80 percent of the listed Philamstar Holdings.

As a holding company, starting in 2000, Philamstar Holdings made money mainly by leasing out its radio towers (Quezon City Building on C.J. Paredes Ave.) and by giving its stock to the minority parties.

But the company got entangled in an ownership dispute between the groups of Edilberto Barrios-Albino and Enrique Sonora, who used to be the chairman of the Presidential Commission on Good Government.

Apparently, due to the dispute, Philamstar Holdings failed to submit periodic reports to the PSE.

Trading of its shares was thus suspended about three years ago.

Subic Freeport posted $1.34B in exports in '10

Subic Freeport—Total exports posted by the Freeport in 2010 to $1.34 billion, contributed mostly by heavy shipbuilding goods, Keppel Heavy Industries Corp. Philippines (KHIPHI).

According to the Subic Bay Metropolitan authority, Keppel was the Freeport's biggest export earner accounting for $725.6 million. The company last year exported two oil tankers—the M/T Coria K and its twin, M/T Dea K—which were delivered to January and March, respectively, in Subic-located Kaptangship Shipping Line.

Keppel officials said the two vessels were the first and biggest crude oil tankers ever built in the country so far. The tankers each tipped the scales at 114,800 deadweight tons and measured 341.27 meters long, 44 meters wide, and 21.36 meters deep.

In February last year, Keppel also completed the APL Subic, a 310-ft-long container ship with a capacity of 4,336 twenty-foot equivalent units (TEU). This vessel was commissioned by the Singapore-based American President Lines (APL).

Subic's total exports last year surpassed by 24.6 percent at $1.34 billion the $1.06 billion registered in 2009.

In a statement, GRIBS Administration for Arnold Araya said the Freeport also served as the biggest source of jobs and taxes to a single year—$16.48 million—in 2010.

He said the Freeport also posted one of its highest importations so far at $3.46 billion.

Araya said the report showed a stronger Subic economy and the growing competitiveness of the Freeport in its manufacturing and trading centers.

Following Keppel among the top exporters were Aganusa chemicals producer Aganusa (Davao) Phil. Inc., which registered $143.3 million in exports; Sarawee—computer model Precision Industries Phil., $75.3 million; Japanese 4000-machine main licensee Rikishi Teromachi, Mecha-tronic Phil. Corp., $42.7 million; and Taiwanese metal manufacturer Tung Lung (Phil.) Metal Industry, $33.1 million.

Completing the top 10 list are Adas Luggage (Phil.) Corp., $21 million; Tiga Cotto, $20.7 million; Pinex Philippines Inc., $22.2 million; Can-

Indo Corp., $20.8 million; and Philo Galis Philippines Corp., $16 million.

At least two of the top 10 exporters were also in the list of the Bureau of Internal Revenue's biggest taxpayers in Subic.

Araya said some projects scheduled by Pinex made it to the 10 biggest investment projects in 2010.

These were Indo Ship Lines Center Inc., which landed at the third spot with its investment commitment of $36.42 million; Auricular Philippines—consumer Super International Corp., $13 million; Islands of Eliseo Resorts, $14.27 million; Isle Bay Brands & Lifestyle Retail Concept Inc., $5.94 million; Perman Holdings Corp., $5.35 million; Edly Land Indo Foundation Inc., $5.33 million; Libra- an Management & Structures Corp., $5.32 million; and last Bernardo Shores Beach Resort Corp., $2.31 million.

Araya said these foreign direct investments (FDIs) made it to Subic's top 10 investments in 2010. SGS Asia Philippines, a Swiss firm that ranked first in the list with its pledge of $1 billion for a cruise project, Sarawee-Inform Investments Ltd., a Chinese company with $75 million for alternative energy projects, and Adidas Nike Inc. (Singapore), a German brand partnership that pledged $15 million.

He said Pinex firms need to accelerate investment in the Freeport when it started in 1993.

"That changed in 2009, when (that) pledged an initial $2 billion investment in its shipyard project here," he said. Shibori Shingano, Shipyard of London

Fed officials play down crude oil price risks

NEW YORK—The Federal Reserve would react to higher oil prices only if the increases spilled over into broader issues, officials of the US central bank said on Tuesday, with some policy makers warning that the Fed would not raise rates until the economy had cooled.

In a similar vein, an official of the European Central Bank and policy makers there said that any tightening move in the current policy is of little use if it may be fleeting.

Oil prices have risen to positions in the Middle East and North Africa have raised fears that the unrest could spread to other major oil-producing countries, which could in turn heighten fuel prices and in turn raise inflation.

The president of the International Monetary Fund, Jeffrey Sachs, said on Tuesday that the potential threat to the US economy is not higher oil prices but that he thought it could prove harmful if they jump much more or create inflationary psychology.

"I think the oil price rise we're seeing is not just a risk to the economy," he said, "but it's also a risk to the economy."

"Oil price changes could have the potential, if they were very large, for changing the economy, but we have a lot of evidence and a lot of data on just in general, and I think it's a manageable risk," he said at a conference organized by the University of Chicago Booth School of Business.

James Wilson, the chief risk officer at Citicorp, said that officials would react if inflation expectations or underlying inflation show persistent gains and begin to reflect in other prices.

"The concern that would exist is to be concerned if inflation expectations, or in other words, that looked like it was getting passed through and it was sustained, would demand a response," he said.

Wilson, who also spoke at the conference organized by the Booth School of Business, said that the Fed's stance on the oil price rise was not as simple as it seemed and that he was not sure if it was as simple as it seemed.

Gaming fans snap up Nintendo 3DS

TOKYO—Game fans in Japan are snapping up the new Nintendo 3DS console as fast as they can get their hands on the new 3D-capable game console, but the console may not be as popular in the larger market as anticipated, some analysts say.

The 3DS, set to launch in the United States and Europe in a month, has opened excitement as the first game console to offer 3D play from 3D gaming, and it has the advantage of launching 10 months ahead of Sony's next-generation PlayStation Vita.

Nintendo said it expects the console to be a hit in Japan, but it is not sure if it will be as popular in the larger market as anticipated, some analysts say.

TOKYO—Nintendo's latest game console, the 3DS, is expected to be a hit in Japan, but it is not sure if it will be as popular in the larger market as anticipated, some analysts say.

head of regional research at Bloomberg Intelligence in Tokyo.

"Nintendo's competitive advantage is that they develop both hardware and software. I don't think they will change to Microsoft's strategy longer term, but because of its competitive edge, they will not see the same growth as Sony's," he added.

Nintendo reports to have sold 1 million units of the 3DS in its first week in the first week of March 31. The original DS sold 145 million units worldwide in its first week.

"Of course it will be difficult to sell more than the DS to Japan or other developed countries," said analyst John Tanaka of Morgan Stanley.

"But if they market it in regions like South America and Asia, it may eventually sell more than the DS," he said.

On Tuesday, game fans lined up at the Big Camera electronics store in Tokyo, where the new 3DS console was on display. The store said it had sold out of the console in its first week.

"I have been since playing games for a while, but 3DS brought me back to it," said Hiroshi Kawada, a 29-year-old from Kawasaki in the suburbs of Tokyo. "What surprised me is that it's different from what the DS can do—it's not that other one is superior."

The launch is expected to hike Nintendo's sagging sales and anticipation has helped push the company's stock price up 10% in the last week.

Tanker victory spells risks for Boeing

NEW YORK—Boeing's triumph over European Airbus in a major US Air Force tanker contract poses risks for Boeing's global market share and could lead to a new round of trade wars.

The Air Force awarded the contract to Boeing's X-47B stealth bomber, which is expected to be a major part of the Air Force's next-generation fighter fleet.

Manila, Feb. 26 (PDI) — The BSP notes that the economy is expected to grow by 7.8 percent this year.

More firms plan expansion this year

BSP notes rise in employment outlook index

By Michelle K. Bano

MANILA, FEBRUARY 26 — More than 50 percent of firms plan to expand operations and hire more workers in the second quarter, showing higher than the country's employment picture would be based on.

According to a survey conducted by the Douglas Street 99 Filipinas, the "employment outlook index" of expansion in the country for the second quarter of 2012 improved by 23 percent from a 23 percent for the same period last year.

The index is measured as the difference between the percentage of respondents who said their firms intended to hire more workers in the next quarter and the percentage of those who said their companies had no such plans.

"An increase supporting expectations of sustained growth in [2012] was the employment outlook index for the next quarter, which improved further," the BSP said in a report showing the results of the survey.

The "expansion plans index"—which is the difference between the percentage of respondents who said their firms have plans to expand operations and produce more and those who said the opposite—rose to +23.8 percent from only +18.9 percent.

BSP Assistant Governor Ma. Cielito Esguerra told reporters last Friday that favorable plans of business in the country for the next quarter supported expectations of the government that the economy this year would maintain the robust growth of 7.7 percent last year.

The economy, measured in terms of gross domestic product, grew 7.2 percent in 2010 in register its fastest pace of expansion in 20 years.

There are doubts, however, about the economy's ability to post another above-7-percent growth this year given base effects and challenges from the global economy, including rising prices of imported oil and food products that could dampen consumption of non-essentials.

The government, however, is so far on track to the growth target of 7.8 percent for this year.

While the economy registered a robust growth last year, that was not enough to cover the country's unemployment rate, which stood at 7.1 percent last October last year.

Nonetheless, said the August unemployment rate despite the growing economy was due to the fact that more people were exiting the country's labor force. To raise the jobless rate, more job-generating businesses had to be created.

Unemployment is one of the reasons cited by economists for the identity crisis problem on poverty. Although the Philippines has managed to consistently grow over the years, even said the global economic recession in 2009, the growth has not been able to cover a decline in the poverty incidence.

Gov't to give public access to data on fund disbursements

By Rosalind W. Domingo

MANILA, FEBRUARY 26 — Increasing transparency and electronic processes to give the public access to information on the release of government funds, especially disbursements from Congress, Budget Secretary Thomas B. Klum said.

"It is one of our top priorities to ensure transparency and fight corruption in the government's financial management," Klum said.

As for sustained economic growth that would reduce poverty and create jobs.

The Budget chief was speaking during the Philippine Development Forum that is scheduled to be organized with the World Bank, at the United Nations Plaza in Pasig City on Thursday.

"As our national responsibility, our government, we have already introduced mandatory public disclosure rules in budgeting," Klum said.

"Starting with the 2011 budget, agencies are mandated to upload on their website information on the allocation and disbursement of funds, including details on the nature and out-put of activities," he explained.

Klum said the government also plans to develop an open technology in ensuring that citizens could easily access information on government affairs.

"A special webpage has been launched for disclosing fund releases from congressional allocations and other lump-sum funds," he said.

"This will be the first, real-time, real-time system will already enable online bidding of projects and their real-time monitoring by the public," he added.

Klum said that the other transparency initiatives that involve electronic processes were currently in the pipeline.

This included some online projects, the Government Integrated Financial Management Information System, which can provide regular, timely and accurate information and reports to oversight and line agencies as well as to the public," he said.

Earlier this month, Klum said the government used this online system to support advertising expenses over the past 10 years by using an electronic system to bid out contracts and engage in other transactions.

When good governance turns bad

THE INCIDENCE of failed business governance has been the latest casualty of the global economic crisis, with many business leaders who once were hailed as heroes, being exposed as quacks.

In no time, the issue of Good Governance (GG) became the buzzword in business organizations up to the present.

"Efficient" truly happened, as some business leaders in the past were able to "make their money" where there are the "right business-making" gone? How are business leaders and business deal makers, did it fail?

According to Amy L. Lockwood, US business leader in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, governance is "the manner in which the shareholders, the board of directors, the management and other stakeholders relate to each other to decide on the company's objectives and determine the means of achieving them."

Business decision-making. It is indeed a relationship among parties—shareholders, management, employees, boards, suppliers, clients, society as a whole. The business of corporations and of society towards achieving a balance between business and social goals," according to Sir Adam Cadbury.

What makes for good GG is the imperative for "business decision-making," that which creates wealth, corporate jobs and on the other hand, social and environmental goals.

For the operational realities of GG, when a stock drops, market depression, it is where the people factor enters the scene. The real challenge lies in the system implementation, to be found, not applied and passed to the next business generation. On a global level, it is a challenge to ensure a balanced business and social goals, to be found, not applied and passed to the next business generation.

In ANY organization, one of the most business-critical relationships is the relationship between leader and follower.

The fact that so many leaders in the business world are struggling with the relationship is a testament to the complexity of this relationship. It is a relationship that is often misunderstood, and it is a relationship that is often mismanaged.

What makes a leader a leader? It is not just the title or the position. It is the ability to inspire, to motivate, and to lead. It is the ability to create a vision and to bring it to life.

What makes a follower a follower? It is not just the title or the position. It is the ability to follow, to support, and to execute. It is the ability to be a team player and to be a team leader.

MPIC joins CFA Phils for the Global Investment Research Challenge

Metro Pacific Investments Corporation (MPIC), the company's primary management and investment company focusing on infrastructure, joined the Chartered Financial Analysts Society of the Philippines (CFA Phils) as this year's subject company for the Global Investment Research Challenge (GIRC).

MPIC, with president & CEO Jose Ma. K. Lim, chief finance officer David J. Ricci and vice president for investor relations Albert S. Figuea, conducted a series of meetings with the student groups to an in-depth presentation of the company's investment portfolio, corporate strategies and future direction.

"MPIC was chosen to be this year's subject for equity reporting because of its dynamic growth and performance in the infrastructure industry which aligns with the government's focus on infrastructure," said CFA Philippines president Ruffian Tan. "It was also key that the management is willing to share relevant information to these students and make time for these sessions amidst their tight schedules."

The CFA Institute Global Investment Research Challenge offers students the unique opportunity to learn from leading industry experts and compete with peers from the world's top finance programs. This annual educational initiative provides best practices in equity research among the next generation of analysts through hands-on mentoring and intensive training in company analysis and presentation skills.

As an old Capitan managing director of brokerage firm First Grade Holdings commented, "It is a valuable understanding for companies to be involved in leading future finance analysts that they can equate to their own good corporate governance, management strategies and risk management".

The challenge gathers students, investment industry professionals, publicly listed companies, and corporate sponsors together to only, regionally and globally for a real world competition. Participation in the challenge provides best practices in study research and company analysis, as students research, analyze and report on a company as if they are pitching analysts.

White Rock Rules

Dubbed White Rock Investments, the University of the Philippines-Diliman tops the 3rd Local Investment Research Challenge "IRC" of the CFA Society of the Philippines and will represent the country at the Regional Research Challenge in Bali, Indonesia.

The IRC is a worldwide competition that aims to promote fundamental research analysis and a win by White Rock Investments would make them Asia's representative at the Global Challenge to be held in Omaha, Nebraska.

Metro Pacific Investments Corporation was the subject company and White Rock will be defending their equity analysis when they compete in Bali.

Each year K-12 shares its distinguished awarding the quality of education the school imparts. The foundation aims to assist deserving students who cannot pursue their studies in USA.

The most teaching was probably the presentation of the book "A Cat Named," which features 50 Kites who teach other people's lives. These are those who dedicate their lives to being a blessing to others by working in outreach programs, setting up foundations, and schooling orphans.

KAAA president Billie Chung-Yung presented a copy of the book "I'm A Farmer" to H. Hsin Hsiang, KAA National Director. In presenting the book to Dr. Hsin Hsiang, Billie Chung-Yung stated that "the objectives of the I'm A Farmer Association are to educate and provide for the formation that the school curriculum. And true to the ideals of our beloved KAA, the needs that were placed have been much fruit among KAA members and students have made significant progress though some gaps and weaknesses exist. Contributions to society in their profession, recreation activities and so forth."

After the march of the "empowered women" composed of the abductees, parents, students, faculty and staff, the Koms and their families concluded EN's 10th annual Jubilee Year with the Housing of the Women's Pleasures of the KAGE Suburb.

Foundation, there will be more activities to look forward to this year marking a year-long celebration.

Spotlight on family bonding moments

By Mark D. Salazar and Kenneth H. del Rosario

"Ito, Para sa paborito kong apo. Si Karen." The "Lolo" (a.k.a. "Karen") ad spot had successfully achieved its goal: it touched viewers' hearts and communicated the message that bonding moments can happen anytime and anywhere.

The McDonald's commercial in 2002 has, perhaps, in many ways, transformed the landscape of the advertising industry in the country. It drew favorable reactions from consumers and critics alike for its genuine and authentic portrayal of a family bonding moment. The ad spot has become a benchmark for successful commercial spots not only for the fast-food chain but also for competing brands.

More than building and boosting the brand, McDonald's started a campaign ground towards family and values—and what better way to illustrate family bonding moments than through a movie theme? For Filipino audiences, going beyond lifting the status but also conveying the need for instruction and companionship.

"There are very rare moments when I see a later customer eating at my store," said Mark Salazar, one of the initiators in launching the advertising approach of McDonald's. He was with advertising agency Leo Burnett Manila at the time when the "Bikolan" campaign was launched. Much later, it was the managing director of ARA-USA Corp.'s Creative Services and Phil Media Group.

"I did my own research of McDonald's stores and tried to see how we can make campaigns resonant with Filipino audiences by observing customer behavior," Salazar said. He realized that Filipinos love to be with family, with other people, and outside together more especially during mealtimes. Salazar created that idea because the signature for McDonald's also locates its brand through eating time.

Kiklat
McDonald's has recently been in ailing state of its well-known commercial, one of them being "Kiklat". It's the story of Mark and Alicia which shows people from all walks of life and how they spend their time together at McDonald's. Alicia and another woman named Susan sing the theme "Kiklat" in the background.

"They are candid shots," Salazar said. "They were not staged and they were real scenes and situations of people that reflected the true culture of McDonald's." Salazar said they asked photographers to capture these scenes on film. The photos were then displayed in every McDonald's store during this time.

McDonald's is re-airing some of its commercials and seen on TV nowadays is the very first 'Kiklat's' campaign

Lolo

When the "Lolo" spot first aired and drew so much positive feedback, Leo Burnett Manila was taken by surprise. "We were initially worried that people would see it as a melodramatic instead of heartwarming," said Salazar. "It was our first attempt to do something different from the usual fast-food commercials back then."

When the video's "red dot" came to, we all drew a huge sigh of relief. "Yes, they got it," Salazar continued. "It was a sign of a slice of Filipino life."

"The audience then people were so moved and understanding that there were called McDonald's brothers who said that a part two should be made and script was even sent to me," Salazar said. He then directed the second "Lolo" spot.

"The public, non-commercial way in which the commercial was created, with natural conversation flow, spontaneity and all, no need to distance from the 'script'—in the effective and soulful direction from film maker 'Henry Ruiz', all contributed to making the campaign a landmark that is to be remembered," said Richard Torres, then creative director of Leo Burnett Manila, who was one of the heads that brought the campaign to fruition.

"The best practitioners of advertising are usually creative and not so."

national observers of real life. Many have come back with many wonderful stories but Leo Burnett Manila and McDonald's have not.

Based on the video, the creative director of Leo Burnett Manila said it was, "the impact of the 'Lolo' spot doesn't come in the form of a single success, but in the fact that it has been successful, one to be heard and well received by audiences without being planned."

Bombing Gali

In 2003, McDonald's and Leo Burnett kept the ball rolling and launched the "Bombing Gali" spot. The story was of a young boy named Gali who was a member of a family of people who were in the Philippines.

The commercial starts with a family with various preparations for a day. Then, people are seen heading towards the church for the day. In the background, there are people singing. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines.

"The best practitioners of advertising are usually creative and not so."

Family Portraits

The "Family Portraits" spot, more commonly known as "Galingan", is another McDonald's TV ad that made a huge impact on Filipino audiences. The depiction of a family and the passing of generations through the family is what a Filipino family is all about. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines.

The story shows an elderly couple living in a small house. They are happy and healthy. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines.

Every stage of growing up until they leave the "house" and then parents being left alone. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines.

The story shows an elderly couple living in a small house. They are happy and healthy. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines. The story is about a family of people who were in the Philippines.

"Galingan" definitely made an emotional connection with audiences both young and old—the spot resonated with audiences with the shared value of love for family and, of course, simple bonding moments at McDonald's.

Frankie's Eyes

"Frankie's Eyes" a commercial spot aired that time with DDB Philippines, known as Sharon Cuneta and daughter Frankie. The spot is an example of just how little can take care from their parents. The spot, said Sharon Cuneta.

The real and reel 'Macbeth'

THE REAL and the reel will be used in Arlene Juan Jr.'s staging of William Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

Months ago, July 14, casually mentioned to Juan a concept she had for the hard tragedy of a Scottish soldier who gains power through murder. "I wanted the supernatural world of Macbeth's projected success as I felt that that would be the direct strategy to the supernatural in the present day."

"Think about it, all our business, desires and projections are embedded on screens."

Cordillera ballet dancer Biag Gaongen's coming of age

The Kankana-oy principal dancer of Ballet Philippines is the central character of Agnes Locsin's work-in-progress paying tribute to Philippine trees

By Stephanie Mendoza
Contributor

THE WHOLE idea of a performance is the concept of a dance in the open air, or in the performance and the performance. Agnes Locsin, as of late, has chosen this type of intimate space, choreographing on the abilities of her dancers, driven by deep emotions that come from her own personal experience, like "Angew's Island," and now in her latest work-in-progress "Upang Tugang Tugang (May sa Pina)," which

A 'Halaw' victory in Berlinale

By Report San Diego Jr.

THE ANIMAL producer Lita Razon is called, came in a "sweet surprise."

Shinya Tsukano's "Halaw (Over the Sea)" won Special Mention from the Jury, with the Production of Asian Cinema (PAC) prize in the 61st Berlin International Film Festival on Saturday.

[The longer prize went to the Japanese film "The Secret" directed by Yoko Kawanishi.]

"Halaw," which was included in the festival program, was also voted for the Cinema for Peace and Amnesty International awards, Razon related.

The "Halaw" cast—composed of Razon, Razon and actress Shila Isabel Lopez—was already preparing to go home when they received the grand award on Saturday morning, to attend the afternoon ceremony for the independent prize.

the faith and clout of revolution, shaping the circumstances of the lives of millions. It shows Zuckerberg opening an account on the website for the first time, looking for human connection. The segment itself is the most who created the social-networking site to alleviate the loneliness of people is revealed to be the loneliest man of all, instead, it was really a sociopath.

This ending is tragic, in the classical sense. In fact, the film explores the superlatives of the legends, both Shakespearean and Greek, ambition and greed, friendship and betrayal, vengeance, hatred, every with the clear structure as signs of destiny.

His ending, "The King's Speech" would belong in a cinema de papa of the '70s, an old-style film of the quality tradition, depicted by the low Marc, "The Social Network" to the Hollywood Renaissance of the '70s, that golden age of ambition and decadent ending, the cinematic art and piece of cinema, the last appears to be more.

Clearly the most majestic is "The King's Speech," about the further achievement of literary, from Ulysses and so, like King and Berni. The reason here is more complicated than the last, the story is more expansive, the visual effects more dazzling, the cast more substantial.

But we can't follow the logic of having this mentioned for two pictures as well as for Ben Affleck's True Grit. It also covers "How to Train Your Dragon" and "The Hobbit" in a foregone conclusion—and what if it's a sign of a sign in the movie category? Having two birds with one stone!

Each following would be justifiable only if there's a total wrap-up that makes it a sign of a sign in the movie category? Having two birds with one stone!

Josh Hartnett in "True Grit" has to live up to the John Wayne tradition.

Check: Ben Affleck should be called Auden. After that, Hollywood tradition would wrap up the story.

Ben Affleck has a chance to be called Auden. After that, Hollywood tradition would wrap up the story, or at least won't have to wrap up.

John Goodman and Josh Hartnett in "The Big Lebowski," a big favorite from the Coen.

GOLDEN WHEEL AWARDS

Buncio is Driver of the Year

By Christopher Cases
Contributor

IT WAS another colorful and glittery night for Philippine motorsports as imperious champion Mico Buncio bagged the coveted Drivers of the Year of the 14th Golden Wheel Awards ceremony at the MGM Grand Theater in Las Vegas City.

The hands-on decision by the Awards Committee landed heavily on the 22-year-old Buncio four-year crown in the Philippine Superbike Championship Series. And with years ahead of him, Buncio, who recently signed up with Suzuki Philippines, would still surpass the record set by 14-time Superbike champion John Igo.

This year's decision came tough for the Awards Committee which had to consider the achievements of latter Stefan Marmiro and drag racer Jonathan Tin.

Marmiro, 38, equaled the feat of Edgardo De Lencastre and Stefan Marmiro in clinching his third career Drivers of the Year crown that marked his successful comeback to the local scene after a year of international stints with the Toyota factory team.

Tin, who was crying his third consecutive Golden Wheel Drivers of the Year award, made an equally strong comeback following his unprecedented eighth straight drag racing crown.

But Buncio's consistency in his non-perfect season campaign earned the nod of the judges.

Jonathan Tin, the leader behind the Golden Wheel Awards, expressed his gratitude to all the drivers, fans, sponsors and supporters for the huge success of the event and expressed high hopes that the Golden Wheel Awards would continue to grow as a prominent Philippine motorsports championship in early on the dream of making a prominent Philippine world championship for future.

We are a big family event, racing is a sport where Filipinos can stand up for the world's best. Philippine drivers have improved a lot since the inception of the Golden Wheel award in 1996 and with our support system, we would soon realize that Scott, said Tin.

From September 18, 1996, Buncio was one of the promising riders in the motorcycle series as age line but his career flourished in 2007 when he bagged his first overall Superbike crown on his maiden year, ending John Igo's long reign that started in 2007.

The 22-year-old champion also further proved his skills when he set the national fastest lap record of 1:27.029 in July 2009 which remains unbroken to date. He likewise brought home to the country an all-around record runner-up honors in the Asia Station of Road Racing in Thailand in 2008, and finished third runner-up in the factory in the US Laguna Seca Superbike in 2008.

And with his new tie-up with Suzuki,

Buncio looks forward to delivering more laurels for the country in the international scene.

"This is perhaps the biggest highlight of my career and I thank the Golden Wheel Awards for this award that will serve as an inspiration to achieve more from the coming years," said Buncio.

Among the other winners of the Golden Wheel award were Juan Sebastian for karting, John Buncio for underbikes, Glenn Aguilar for motorcycles, Mico Buncio for karting, Tin for drag racing, Marlon Salazar-Cabrera for dirt off-road racing, Alan Pantoja for driving, William Tin for grand touring cars, Scott Gettel for Asian senior karting and Yusef-Sana Ibrahim for Asian junior karting.

The long list goes a standing ovation when he was crowned to the Hall of Fame - joining four other previous winners Rolando Buncio in 2007, Sana Ibrahim in 2008 and Stefan Marmiro last year.

And for the first time in years, the Golden Wheel also conferred media awards to QTV-11's Nika for the X-Factor: Racing & Endless experience, ABS-CBN's TV-11 for the X-Factor: Stefan Marmiro & John Buncio's experience, The Philippine Daily Inquirer for the numerous articles published featuring motorsports and motorsport events, and sports website "PDP Online" for his article "Year of the Speedway" published by Philippine Daily Inquirer last September that was the first Philippine magazine award as the Best Motorsports story.

The event was hosted by 99.1 FM Racing and under the banner and active model JC Caudales with Bob and Maria providing the entertainment.

Celebrations were also hosted for the champions in karting, racing cars, drag racing, underbikes, motorcycle racing and motorcycles.

The more affordable Panamera is now here.

The new Panamera V6.

Yes, we can achieve world-class without compromising the fun. Just as with the Golden Wheel Awards, we can achieve the fun of the Panamera. Highly efficient, extremely sporty and extremely affordable. With an enhanced fuel economy of 12.1 liter/100 km (20.1 mpg) and 200 hp of power. There's a lot to love about the Panamera V6, available in standard, standard Plus or the optional Panamera Sport package. (MSRP including Sales Tax, Dealer Fee, and optional Panamera Sport package.)

2010 season highlights

By Christopher Caines

PHILIPPINE motorsports enjoyed another year of success with the dramatic conclusion, intense battles and the rise of a new breed of potential champions that highlighted the 2010 racing season. Surviving the struggles and extreme challenges that the country laid out only proved that motorsports racing has lived up to its spot as another vital sector of Philippine sports - thanks to spectators, drivers and other people behind it who have shown dedication and hardwork to keep it more alive.

The competition leveled up with the emergence of new talents who made the year for them much tougher for the topguns, whether in a new generation in Philippine racing at the turn of the decade.

Of all who secured the most rounds of victory last year, three champions achieved significant milestones in their careers -

Mauro Biondi, Felipe Marudo and Jonathan Tin. The 22-year-old Mauro captured the Philippine Superbike Championship Series crown for the fourth consecutive year. And with years ahead of him, he could still repeat the record but of 14-time superbike champion John Igo.

It wasn't easy though, with the continuing saga of his rivalry with 13-time successive champion Glenn Aggular and the rise of 16-year-old Dado Villanueva as a top contender in the Open class. Despite the engine problems that added extra wear for season, he went on with a more polished campaign for the second title.

Mauro, too, had his own share of challenges before claiming his third career honor of the Year photo. After a year of international campaigns as a Top Kart Factory driver, Mauro found himself struggling to against the younger bunch of talents led by Ricky Bontas and John Tanalua of InsideRaces who showed marked improvements last year.

But his big win in the final leg at Carmona Raceway sealed it all, forging a successful comeback in the local scene as he equaled the

THAT STARTS BEFORE YOUR CAR DOES

Did you know that up to 75% of engine wear happens during warm up? That's why Castrol Magnatec's intelligent molecules are different. They dramatically reduce engine wear when it matters most - during warm up. While all oils drain to the sump when the engine's off, Castrol Magnatec's intelligent molecules don't. They cling like a magnet to your engine, sticking silently to their task, so they are always ready with an extra layer of protection, from the moment you turn the key.

IT'S MORE THAN JUST OIL...IT'S LIQUID ENGINEERING.

spotted by their game while a new lead accident victim homicide in spin. But his position for speed and racing skills were guaranteed, suggesting the promoter's to remain at the point of the day racing series.

Great racing was equally exciting with the race to reach battle between local champion Mike Suarez and William Tan. It was dominated the race to the early stages for Tan control of the race with his superior skills and handling.

The big twist came when a back injury forced Tan to quit the race. Tan's injury was a setback to his first racing career.

Popular growth and new racing events added life to Philippine racing. The entry of 1000cc F1 racing provided a boost in racing with its young talent crew led by Mike and William Suarez, 121 and 122, and the 1000cc.

Motorcycle racing also thrived as evidenced in the Philippine Underbone King Championship where James Suarez captured his second annual Underbone King title.

Inside Philippine also played a role in the growth of Underbone racing as it opened up tracks to add a touch to its pool of riders led by Anthony Fernandez and Paul Zola who will become the country's champions in the international arena this year.

Automotive industry, backed by GRC, provided a new avenue for motorcycle enthusiasts as the title-changing race of Pan. Four days inspired former riders to join the team.

Set J Sports, a local sports group from the governing NAMRIA, kept motorcycle racing as one of the country's most popular sports in the future. The group of GRC officials who remained the country's greatest motorcycle champions after logging his 120th career win this year.

With the Clark International Speedway in full swing, the influx of new technology and the emergence of new talent, Philippine motorcycle racing is expected to be more exciting and dynamic.

"The booming oil crisis brought about by the crisis in the Middle East definitely will have its effect but we expect more thrilling and unpredictable races and more talent to come out in the 2011 season," said 80 motorcycle races and 1000cc racing series.

THE local motorcycle population is booming, thanks to world-class facilities like the Bonifacio High School.

Suzuki's Team Pilipinas joining Asia Road Race for international debut

From now on, there will only be one team representing the Philippines in any international motorcycle competition.

And they will all be powered by Suzuki motor bikes.

The Philippine Sports Commission in January last year granted full endorsement to Team Suzuki Philippines, to be known as Team Pilipinas from now on—and will have the full backing of the national flag as well as the endorsement of the local motorcycle racing world, news and visitors.

In fact, Team Pilipinas is now setting its sights on the upcoming Asia Road Racing Championship, the continent's premier motorcycle road racing championship that is held in a number of countries—Malaysia, Japan, Indonesia, India, China and Japan.

This will be the first time the Philippines will be fielding a team to this prestigious international tournament.

Team Pilipinas, which dominated the 2010 Philippine Underbone King Championship last year as well as other locally organized racing events, will be led by one of the country's best riders, Mike Suarez, and join Lory Fernandez, riders of Team Suzuki Pilipinas.

In a single season, Suzuki Motor Bikes, CPO's national general manager for motorcycle sales and marketing, formally received the honor of endorsement from the Philippine Sports Commission.

API, the country's only integrated motorcycle industry company, said it is a great honor to be appointed as the national team's sponsor. It is a great honor to be appointed as the national team's sponsor. It is a great honor to be appointed as the national team's sponsor.

The Panamera V6 Sport Driving Experience

A sporting character with a high standard of comfort and everyday driving qualities, a luxury sedan and a sports car all rolled into one

PURCHASE Drive Philippines (backed by Robert Caputo III) recently held a one-day sport-driving activity for the Porsche owners and enthusiasts at the Clark International Speedway in Pampanga last February 19, 2011.

"This driving program was part of our effort to promote the very new, internationally acclaimed Porsche Road Show event," reveals Caputo III. He adds, "We are very happy to share our driving experience with them from the comfort of a car, to racing on a track to maximize the potential of our cars."

"We have an exclusive joint partnership with Johnny Tan of Clark International Speedway. That's why we have promoted presence by way of prominent signage on all around the track. We find this an opportunity to hold our driving experience at the car after our purchase a safe experience."

Debuted the Porsche Sport Driving Experience, the Panamera V6 can now drive on a road (city) customer under the professional supervision of the legendary Panamera racing club led by Michael Panamera, PGA Car Motorsports Manager, champion race driver George Panamera and current Philippine Touring Car Championship champion John Fernandez.

Robert Caputo, PGA Car Importer principal of Porsche in the country, attended the event. The participants experienced the Panamera V6 while tackling several exercises on the track, designed to highlight its features. It gave them the opportunity to test the Panamera's performance and handling as well as highlight its distinctive character of being both a luxury sedan and a true sports car all rolled into one.

Open track sessions in the morning and afternoon allowed the Porsche owners to experience driving their vehicles on the 4.2 kilometer closed circuit.
